1. Background

The Mediterranean region is one of the world's leading tourist destinations. Facing growing competition and deterioration of the political and security situation, the destination has demonstrated symptoms of a slowdown, which makes the recovery of the sector an economic priority. This downturn may also present an opportunity to transform the tourism model into a sustainable and competitive one, addressing current sectorial challenges as the predominance of mass seaside tourism, dependent on the European market and territorial imbalances. MEDUSA will tackle these joint challenges via targeted and inter-related capacity building and cross-border interventions to develop and promote adventure tourism in the region, a niche which grew by 195% between 2010 and 2014. By designing and testing routes and itineraries that offer improved adventure tourism products, MEDUSA will contribute to job creation and income for local communities in the medium and long term. Moreover, the project has the potential to reveal lesser-known destinations and attract tourists throughout the year.

The project aims at improving the visibility of less-known destinations and local communities able to generate and improve adventure tourism products will be increased, resulting in new job opportunities, especially for women and youth. Furthermore, a more balanced distribution of tourist streams in terms of seasonality and geographical areas will be supported, as well as the inclusion of local communities in the tourism business. In addition, the project will focus on the environmental footprint of tourism activities through safeguarding biodiversity, wildlife, natural resources, and rural communities.

Who will benefit?

- 110 public authorities among tourism and environmental ministries, regional and national governments, municipalities, tourism boards and associations
- 250 organizations from the private sector including tour operators and travel agencies, tourist guides, SMEs, farmers, hotel developers, NGOs
